

The Opioid Emergency: How did this happen and where do we go from here?

Hear from local expert, Matt Layton, about some factors that contributed to the current opioid emergency, discuss the physical, psychological, social and spiritual impacts of the emergency and consider possible solutions.

Facilitated by Matthew Layton, Elson S. Floyd College of Medicine WSU

October 3, 2017 5:45 - 7:45 p.m.

O' Doherty's Irish Grille (all ages)

525 W. Spokane Falls Blvd., Spokane, WA 99201

$5 General admission

Includes discussion and first beverage

Register at <http://www.nwabr.org/conversation/spokane>

What are Community Conversations?

Each informal Conversation explores a topic in biomedical science and its relationship with ethics, medicine, research and society, connecting people to the biomedical research community. Learning from each other, our goal is to help people thoughtfully engage in and advance biomedical research. Everyone is welcome. No science background necessary.

In partnership with NWABR member Whitworth University and supporters Gonzaga University and Spokane Regional Health District. Thanks to our series sponsor Whitworth University!

